CHICAGO, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1861.

PROM JEFFERSON CITY! The officers of Col. stuting are regarded here to-day from Lexington. They take the first train for St. Louis. Capt. Gleason has two wounds—one in his left arm and the other in his cheek, but he is not seriously injured. Capt. Dan. Quirk looks as good natured as when serving out news behind Mo. Nally's counter. Says he to me, "The rebels and the first for the counter of the man around time for the boat us, but we gave them a good turn for the honor of Chicago,"

A beat with hespital stores and a flag of truce, starts to-day for Lexington to coavey trace, starts to-day for Lexington to convey the wounded to Bt. Lonis. The wives of sev-eral of the wounded are here on the way to see theirhusbands and minister to their wants. Colonel Knoblesdorf's Northwestern Rifle Regiment got orders yesterday to take the rain to Secalia. They marched down to the river bank and remained there nearly all day on the street. Towards night they were marched back to the Capitol building, which they have occupied since they came here. The mea were kept in ranks for hours. The day down on the road, wrapped their blankets around them and took a doze. This is a speci-men of the order and management that reigns here. Col. Julius White's regiment are aboard a first-rate chance of sharing the fate of the Mulligan regiment. Yesterday White's regi-ment received their winter overcosts, and now feel comfortable. Why was he not reinforced? is a question the people of Illinois is asking. That he was not is pain-fully true. The loss of 5,000 soldiers, 3,000 stand of first-class arms, a battery of field ar-tillery, 800 horses and mules, numerous wag-oss, excellent camp equipage, considerable stores and ammunition—in short, National trington, seem to invite a change of the plan and a transfer of the seat such a change is practicable and apparent when we remember that fortified camp at Manassas, half of property to the value of a quarter million dol-lars, were some of the fruits of the failure to reinforce Mulligan, or remove his command To britised camp at Manassas, haif of army, if it is as large as rumor makes waid defy any force that we could send that it, while the forty or fifty thousand ared off, and sent by rail to Tamessee the border of Kontucky, would be an match for anything we have in that reconvenit actions to the could be sent there.

several days before the siege commenced that Piece, Harris, Green, Slack, Reins and other insurgent chiefs had combined their class and were moving towards Lexington. Price halted some days at Warensburg, thirty miles south of Lexington to collect his roving bands together. The advance guard of Price's army, under Gen. Harris, 3,000 strong, made their appearance on the evening of September 11th, and a sharp battle was fenght that evening between them and Marshall's Cavalry and the 13th Missouri regiment, two miles south of Mulligan's entrenchments, in which the loyal troops had the advantage. Next day Price arrived with 15,000 more men, and when the while ended the rebels had swollen to over 30,000. It seems strange that Mulligan did not forcee that his steambouts must lamediately be captured and his supply of water ent off whenever the enemy arrived in strong force. His bosts were moored where they were begind the protection of his grans. They were quickly taken after little or no resistance. His retrest acroes the river was then cut off, and any reinforcements that might arrive on the opposite bank could render him no assistance. No help from the north side of the river was practicable, after the capture of his uprotected steamers. Nor could he keep the rebals out of Lexington. They swarmed into the town as soon—as they came is sight of his works. Again, one quarter of his force consisted of cavalry, destitute of carbines and armed with borse pistols and swerds, and consequently were unfit to defend entrechaneuts, except in close hand to hand fighting. The captains of the exvalry forcease the trap into which they were about falling, and seven of them laid the matter before Col. Marshall, and urged him to obtain orders for their transportation across the river—at least to have their horses sent over and left in charge of a detail. But no attention was paid to this timely advice. After wards they implored Marshall to let them mount the men and charge upon the rebels, but he refused either to lead or follow them, and the result is known. Had Col. Multigan extensed north or west, and formed a junction with General Surgie' troope, and with other troops under General Pope. The whole matter may be summed up in a short sentence: It is certain.

Had Col. Mulligus evacuated his trenches and taken position on the other side of the Miscouri, Price could not have surrounded him. He could have retreated north or west, and formed a junction with General Sungis' troops, and with other troops under General Pope. against 50,000 men? Second, The reinforcement under Sturgis was not dispatched by Fremont's orders at all, but by Gen. Pope, who was at St. Joseph at the time he heard of Col. Mulligan's dilemma.

Gen. Pope had been employed clearing the Hannibal and St. Joseph road of bridge burners and cut throats. With his limited force he had cleaned North Missouri for the second time. While superintending the rebuilding of the Platte bridge, (the scene of the great disaster) news came that Price was advancing, on Mulligan. He did not wait for ox-ders from St. Louis, but forthwith sent a measunger to Gen. Sturgis, who was repailing senger to Gen. Sturgis, who was repairing bridges on the North Missouri railroad, to gather what troops he could, and proceed with all haste to Lexington. Sturgis acted day, when he learned that i'e steamboats had fallen into the enemy's hands and that an ambuscade awaited him. The alternative was placed before him, either to go forward into placed before him, either to go forward into certain destruction, or retreat and save his command. He wisely chose the latter, coun-termstriched to Richmond, then turned west and pushed on to Liberty Landing, seemed a steamboat there, embarked his torces and baggage, and went up the river to Wyandotte, where he landed his troops.

Meanwhile Gen. Pope dispatched Colonel Smith of the Ill. 16th to form a junction with Col. Scott's Third Iowa regiment, and with and that is, White takes excellent good care of his men.

I met Capt. H. N. Sayder to-day, who took

Col. Scott's Third lows regiment, and with such Home Guards as could be procured, to make a forced march, south, get between the river and a body of 4.000 rebels, whom Pope had driven out of St. Joseph, who were hast ening to join Price at Lexington, prevent their crossing, and capture or disperse them, and then march down the river opposite to Lexington, cross over in Mulligan's steamers, ing without awaiting for Col. Smith to come up, were defeated and fell back, and that the rebels made good their junction with Price. but learned on the way that Mulligan's boat sted all his means and was at the end of General Fremont in his dispatch speaks of Lane's forces in the southwest and Davis's in the southeast with upwards of 11,000 men, who could not get to Lexington in time. The actual truth is, that neither Lane nor Davis were ordered to reinforce Mulligan. Davis was in this city until the 24th of September, sand men. He never stirred a peg; he says he had no orders to march his troops to Lexington. There was abundance of thme to have gone up the river by beats, or to have taken the Pacific railroad to Sedalla and then marched on Lexington, had orders been promptly given. There was time enough to have sent several thousand troops from Rolla and St. Louis to Sedalla, had the order been given when Gen. Fremont was notified that Price was marching on Lexing Mulfigan at Lexington, or of capturing disperse. No regard was paid to this advice. Gen. Hunter was ordered to Rolla, where he r mained a week; he was then ordered to senerate to await orders, where he has been since the 22d, waiting for the orders.

As to Gen. Lanc, no one knew exactly where he was. The last reliable information placed him in Bates County, Mo, at the head of ten or twelve hundred men. There is no probability that he ever received an order from Government to go to the aid of Mulligan, and it is extremely doubtful whether such an or reinforce Muligan, or remove his command to a less exposed position, A part of the blune, Fremont's defenders say, staches to Col. Mulligan; but the greater portion falls on Gen. Fremont. Why did not Mulligan cross the river when he learned that Price was murching upon him with overwhelming forces? they sek. His scouts informed him several days before the sleep command that the property of the state of th Troops at Holia and Ironton.

Its St. Louis in Danger?

[From the Missouri Democrat, ist.]

The secessionists of this city pretend to take great comfort in the notion that the cry of "On to Lexington." has driven. Fremont out of St. Louis, and left the city open to the strack of either Hardee, from the direct long of Great ville, or Jeff. Thompson from the neighborhood of New Medrid. McCulloch, it is rimmered, has not joined Gen. Price, nor does he intend to join nim, but is cherishing dealigns upon Rolls. We are surprised that this kind of talk is giving real sixen to many of our Union Friends. There is not a particle of danger.

haspesi to us. Ironton is now in possession of three illinois regiments, which are sufficient to check any demonstration from Hardee. Jeff. Thompson dare not push on to the northward for fear of the superabundant forces at Cairo and Bird's Point, which would surely fall in upon his rear and make an easy capture of him. Rolls is guarded by two regiments, and can be fully reinforced, as well as Ironton, is a half a day.

Admitting the possibility that all these points may be turned against us, and that the century, in force, will advance upon the citystill there is no serious cause for airm. There are to-day is no serious cause for airm. There are to-day is no serious cause for airm. There are to-day is no serious cause for airm. There are to-day is no serious cause for airm. There are to-day in thousand frope is camp ground St. Losia, and within forty-cight hours as many more could be commanded from the camps in Illinois and Indians. The fortifications around the city, for the construction of which Gen. Frement has been so lavishly abused, are completed, and by the close of this work are expected to be fully mounted with the heavy guas now in the city intended for term. Oan anything further be provided for our safety? We think all apprehensions may be fully and and finally dismissed.

The work of fortifying Federal Hill is progressing rapidly under the direction of Colonel Governour K. Warren of tha N. X. General Mitchell yesterday telegraphed to Camp Dennison for all the commandants of regiments to meet him last night at the Burnet House. Accordingly the commandants of the 15th, 17th, 18ts, 18th, 38th, and 36st came down, and all except the 53 received marching orders. He also ordered the batteries in Kentucky, and by telegraph he directed Co. Q. 584 Regiment, to cook three days rations, and hold themselves ready for daty. Gen. O. M. Mitchel stated at the Burnet House, last evening, in a brilet address to the Thirty-first Ohio Regiment, which was on the way to Kentucky, that he had news of the passage of heavy reinforcements for General Zollicoffer through Cumberland Cap, and the movement of the robel army towards Central Kentucky. Ohio troops are being thrown forward with all possible expedition, to reinforce Gen. Thomas at Camp Dick Robinson, and a bettle is expected in final quarter directly. Gineinnant is profoundly interested in military operations in that direction, for if Zollicoffer should prove victorious he might confective should prove rictorious he might be advanced to advance upon us, with the design of moving the sent of war into Northern Kentucky, and if possible, carrying it to the bark of the Ohlo. But we think he will be well whipped, and that the sent of war will be moved further South.

Rovements of Major General Butler.

(Washington Dispusch to N. Y. Tribune.)
There has been much speculation in regard to General Butler's visit to Washington immediately after the capture of the forts at Hatters in Irid, and his failure to return after wards to either Fortress Mouroe or the Southern Alfantic coast. The iscita are, that when General Butler started upon the expedition that resulted in the occupation of Fort Staters and Clark, the orders given were to obstruct the navigation of the index and destroy or disable the forflications along the North Carolina coast. Upon arriving at Hatterss, the strength of the forts and the importance of the position induced the General, in the exercise of his discretion, to occupy instead of destroying the forts. This departure from the orders made it necessary for the General to report to the Department here. He had the gratification to know that what had been done was cordially approved, and the wisdom and foresignt of his suggestions, made two morths before, were completely vindicated by the adoption of the sprayman he had indicated. He had entered the service without time for any arrangement of his business at house, and went there to stend the private affairs, when he was immediately receiled, and authorized to raise a diristicity receiled, and cantorized t

diff all the field officers. On Delaware street they were halted in three divisions, to facilitate they getting on the cars, and the divisions were marched up, put aboard, and got off more rapidly and quickly than we ever saw it done before. There was no disorder nor running back and forth. Every man know his place, and when the order came, they moved, and not before. We predict that this regiment will make its mark if it has half a chance. The arms are Enfield rifles for over 400, and Springfield rifles for the rest, a most aplendid armament and in the best of hands.

Stepping on the March to Hestere a Negro.

[From the St. Louis Democrat, tat.]

Dr. W. H. Brown, of Laclede, St. Louis county, compalmed to the Frevet Marshal, a day or two ago, that a com any of soldlers of Major Reser's division of Gen. Signite Brigade, while passing through Laclede, on their way to Jefferson City, on Friday last, had seized one of his negroes and carried him off with them Immediately on hearing this complaint, Col. McKell telegraphed to Major Escept of Jefferson City concerning the matter. An immediate asswer was received, stating that the negro, when the fact of his having been unlawfully selized had come to the knowledge of the officers, had been committed to the jall in Jefferson City, where he remained, subject to the orders, had been committed to the jall in Jefferson City, where he remained outleged to the order of the owner. When Dr. Brown learned this, he claimed that the negro should be returned to him, at the expense of the Government. The Propost Marshal concurred is this, and took Immediate steps to have the negro restored free of charge to Dr. Brown.

this point had risen distent feet, and at dark

The river is covered with immense quantities of drilivood, and houses, barns and whest,

One hay stack passed the city yesterday on fire, and a house that was swept along on the rushing weless confained several persons, who did not appear to be any more sharmed than it they were passengers on a first-cleas steamer.
Whether they will be enabled to pass the pontees bridge at Padisuals or the blockade at Cairo, remains to be seen. About fifteen thousand foot of lumber, lying near the mouth of Mill Crapk, were swept away during the day. The destruction of property on the banks of the Big Sandy and the two Kasawhas must have been immonse. The rise in the Ohio is occasioned mainly by those streams.—

Among the new animals discovered is the Gorilla, a species of gigantic apa, walking erect like man, and possessed of fremendous power. The tiger fears him, and as the lion is not found in the region he inhabits, Du Chailla conjectures that "the king of beasts" has wisely left this portion of the continent to the Gorilla, thinking it not safe to contend with so powerful an antagonist. This animal is fearfully like man, and our author confessed o feelings akin to those of a murderer when to feelings akin to those of a murderer when he was destroying them.

The researches both of Dr. Livingstone and Du Chailla, have abundantly proved that the central regions of Africa lying south of the equator, are by no means unhealthy. Du Chailla thinks that, starting from near the coast, as important moustain range divides the continent dear the equator, and that the great fivers of Africa have their origin among its snow-clad peaks.

If the citiaens of Chicago will invest ten millions in manufacturing such sricles as are now well protected, such as woollen, cotton, and from manufacturies, they may set all railroads or other conshinations at datance. The sum so expended will add $100,000 do the value of Chicago in ten years, will employ a large population now raising corn at ten cents per broade, and will certainly reduce the raises of freight to a moderate standard. Capitalists may now invest in sasunfacturing with entire confidence, as the war debt we are now making will necessitate a continuance of a protective tariff for many years to come. I hope they will try the experiment.

A Provost Marshal.

What is your idea of a Provost Marshal?

Minotsur in the labyrinths of reace to de your unsue; citig seccessionists; in Argus, whose hundred eyes no tyre can lail to sleep; or, if you like it better, a Brisrous, for we are told that when treasonnemaced the throne of Jupiter the hundred-handed giant ascended the heaven, and so terrified the conspirators by his flerce and threatening looks that they desisted. You never see a Provost Manshal; you never hear him; but his eyes are everywhere. Treason has been wisspared in the morning, and the traitor is in Fort Lafayette before night, on his warrant. He has not a particle of gallantry, either, for whon certain very agreeable ladies of this town met over the tea-table to continue their correspondence with their friends and adorers in Richmond, the Provest Marshal quietly took possession of their letters and placed a guard over their dwellings. He hannts treason like a shadow, such mat the strangest way of going down to the bottom of people's trunks, of opening people's burse drawers, of discovering hise floors in carriages, of dragging to the light query documents, and mans, and private communications intended for the edification of J. Davis & Co. Here, in Washington, yet cannot escape film. He puts out the fires arreas discovery climas, and gots into the private entrance of drams-shops and gambling associans. He has spoiled many a good drink, and broken up many a game of face and houte. He is the natural foe of sullers, and has a singular fashion of going down to the bottom of wigons and emploring asspicious barrels. A day or two since I saw a wagon load of breast going acroes the Long Bridge. Bread is an innocent article, but presently a corporal mounted behind, and sent his beyonet burrowing among the loaves. A mounest more and their leaves were gently heaped on one side and a dozen kegs of boer were rolled into the quarter RANKING HOUSE OF

This regiment is thoroughly med and equipped, and is reputed to be ore efficient than any of its predecessors, if the a thing be possible.

HE CONCERT LAST EVENING.—The concer at evening as Bryan Hall was given to a time of cold audience. Mrs. Bostwick appeared little advantage, owing to severe neuralgle orbibes in her face, which would certainly soil the efforts of any singer of human competition. The other performers did as well could have been expected, with the anying but finiteering prospect before them.

was a leak somewhere, and diligent inquiry was made to ascertain the locality of the missing funds, but without avail. The search was given up as useless, and fifteen thousand dollars were charged to profit and loss.

Curionaly enough, a considerable portion of these funds has come to light in Chleago, in a novel manner. Among the returned members of the Irish Brigade was one Henry Bradburn, who came richly laden with the spoils of war. He had evidently made the seige of Lexington, whatever its result collectively, a matter of profit Individually, from the lavish mainer in which he squandered Farmers' Bank fives on Monday. Bradburn had in his possession $2,702. He gathered about him a gang of thieves, awindlers and prostitutes, and the crowd held high carnival over the booty. He purchased rich dresses and clothed the crowd in purple and fine linen. For once, the "swell mob," much to their astonishment, came out in broadcloth. They stended some foot races where Bradburn, in a state of gross intoxication, bet heavily and of course on the wrong man every time thereby materially, diminshing his stock of Farmer's fives. During the latter part of the day, Bradburn took a financial turn and went among the brokers. They willingly took $600 of the money—worth ninety cents on the dollar—for $180 in gold and his pile was again diminished, leaving him but $600. He had during the day got rid of $1900.

In this plight he was found by the police, who were knowing to the chreumstances and taken into custody. Upon his arraignment before the Police Magistrates Bradburn sverred that he came honestly by the money although he was not very lucid in his statements as re-before the Police Magistrates Bradburn averred that he came honestly by the money although he was not very lucid in his statements as regarded the manner in which he obtained it. He readily acknowledged that it was a part of the treasure buried in the entrenchments but whether it was given to him or was dug up by him, has not yet been ments but whether it was given to him or was dug up by him, has not yet been ascertained. In any event, it is clear that our local anthorities have no Jurisdiction in the case, as the theft, if there be any, was committed in Missouri. Most of the bills have been recovered by the police, who at present hold the money in their possession, with what it projects it is difficult to ascertain.

The case is a curious one, but the law is clearly an experiment of the law is electic, and, like the Procrustean bed, may be stretched to suit any case. The Irish Brigade has never been mustered out of service, and Bradburn being here without furlough or permission of any kind, is in the eyes of the law a deserter. The matter has been brought before the Government Agent in this city, and we are informed that the unfortunate Bradburn will be remanded to St. Louis, where possibly the Farmer's fives' matter may find some practical solution.

Mr. Hoyt said that ex-Alderman Effitherpa told him he knew of a man who could convict Mr. Ward. of malfeasance, but averred that that man would not come forward and testify because the Comptroller could alter the books so as to break down his testimony.
Mr. Hoyt further said, the committee had now sat here six nights patiently. He had come here with only one idea, and that was to but among the public generally. It was time they washed their hands of the whole thing. He would therefore move that the Committee report that there were no substantial charges against Comptroller Ward, and that the per-sons professedly making the charges were the only ones implicated at all in dishonest trans-actions.

devotees to obey them.

Which is all vory natural.

The war has created and havoe among the gay, dashing, galant young fellows, and one gay, dashing, galant young fellows, and one gay, dashing a constitution of the wars, and Araminia sits plulog at the tother and time and fill the aching rold but plunge into the vortex of fashion, do the novelties, and drown care at the milliner's and modister's?

Accordingly, when a few brief moons ago, the seed pecterals, by an ant French glaster by the case of the work, and and yellow treases, all "cribbed, cabined and confined" in the beaded and apungled meshes of silken and velver nets. Another bulletin is issued. Nets are no longer to be worn, save by ancient maidema, elatternly housekeepers and the girl Bridget, who are supposed to ignore the toilet, and have no time to "do up" bair.

Hereafter, fashion decrees that broad loops, braided low at the sides, are the indices of few; nets, of sloveliness. Already the change is being made, and the inshion has been treated.

STATE ARMS.—There are in various parts of this State large amounts of artillery, small arms, rabres and ether military equipments and munitions belonging to the State, that are much needed by our volunteers in actual tervice and in camps of instruction, and I am instructed by the Hon. John Wood, Quartermaster General et the State of Illinois, to immediately report to him, the number, kind and location of all such material. And all persons having charge of, or knowing the whereabouts of any artillery, small arms, salves or other equipments belonging to the State, are carmently requested to report the same to me at Chicago, as soon as possible, and will render as important acrivic to the State by so doing.
